Teaching Philosophy

As a teacher of tourist guidance and tourism courses, I feel that student engagement is enhanced by Specific teaching methods that best reach a diverse student population. It is my responsibility to create a learning environment that dynamically engages students in course topics. I believe that the best way to achieve such engagement is through passion, process, projects, and people.

As I progress in my teaching career, I learn from each course that I teach, using student feedback to modify the course to create better learning opportunities. To demonstrate that I listen and learn from student feedback, I communicate feedback from course surveys and communicate how that feedback would change the course content or my delivery of the course.

Within three to five years, it is my goal to develop a new course based on my research related to Tourism Innovation and Creativity, Tourism Sustainable Development, New Tourism Types and Trends, Tourism Planning, Tourism Marketing and Promotion.

Training Philosophy

Training is developing your understanding to achieve innovative abilities and knowledge. Continuous learning is about inspiring employees to progressively learn by offering them with the instruments that accelerate this learning. It should be established on:

- Emphasis on upgrading the skills of your executives. ...
- Make it public. ...
- Combine it. ...
- Lean into teamwork. ...
- Make it applicable. ...
- Discover and investigate.
